

Top 5 Putter for 2015.

Which will make you a better golfer?

Most people buy putters based on “feel”. But there’s a lot more to it than that. The following 5 putters have been ranked as the top 5 putters for 2015 based on a number of factors, including appearance, feel, roll off the putter face, alignment, weight balance and price/value. Try them and see if you agree.

Odyssey White Ice Two-Ball Blade Review

Blade Style Putter

Ok, so we all know that Odyssey is the number 1 putter on the market, but they make so many different models that we had to have more than one on this list. After all, they have the technology in putter manufacturing down pat. This putter offers two of the top elements in putters—a heel-toe design that’s face weighted with a lined two ball alignment that makes it so easy to line up. Also, the ball comes off that polymer face really nicely. It’s mid-priced at $179.

Taylor Made Est 79 TM-210 Putter Review

Heel Toe Putter

This black heel-toe blade putter has some nice horizontal lines on the face insert. Taylor Made calls this insert the Pure Roll Surlyn insert. It gives you the feeling that if you deliver a slight ascending blow with your stroke, the ball should roll nicely with topspin. It feels very easy to control and use. This putter has a nice tacky rubber grip and is priced at only $99. This head design had been around a long time because the offset hosel design just works for a lot of golfers.

Ping Scottsdale Tomcat S Putter

Mallet Head Style Putter

This mallet head from Ping has the best feel of all. The ball just jumps off the putter face with topspin and rolls great. That black head and slight offset really helps to add topspin. Alignment is a piece of cake because of the white alignment line. The roll is surprising, considering that there are no grooves or texture on the putter face. The face is a thermoplastic elastomer and just gives you a nice solid feel every time. The price for all of this is only $129.

Odyssey 2-Ball White Ice Bronze

Offset Mallet Head Putter

This putter has that popular two-ball design and double offset shaft that Odyssey is known for. The bronze finish is just to make it have a premium look. The grip has a nice tacky sensation, which will perform well, even when conditions are hot or wet. It's a very forgiving putter with the two-ball design that many beginners and middle handicappers like. This putter replaces the classic mallet head two-ball Odyssey putter. Selling price is around $179.

Odyssey White Ice D.A.R.T. Long Putter

Long putter

You may not like the looks of this putter, and you might not like separating your hands to putt the ball, but results don't lie. Why do so many tour pros use them, and why is it being banned from the tour next year? It's not a cheap putter at $189, but you get a lot of putter for your money. It uses a D.A.R.T system for direction and alignment. Seems a little gimmicky, but results speak for themselves. This whole long putter concept can really take the wrist hinge and handsy movements out of the stroke and give you better results. Plus, it's hard to argue with sales results. Most stores attribute around 30% of their putter sales to this product. The grip is just as ugly as rest of the putter. But it works!

So pick your poison. Visit your pro shop or sporting goods store and just try them. After a little while, you'll know which one feels the best. And that is really what makes you a good putter. Confidence!
